

LOMBOK ISLAND

INTRODUCTION

- Lombok displays cultural variety than Bali. Its population is divided among a Muslim majority, Balinese Hindus and animist who blend certain elements of Islam with ancestor and spirit worship as part of a faith known as Wetu Telu (literally " three-time muslim", because its adherents pray three times daily instead of five). The majority ethnic group is the sasak, who live, primarily in eastern and central Lombok. The ethnic Balinese, on the other hand, is settled mostly in the western third of the island. They believe Agung (Bali's sacred peak) and Rinjani (Lombok's highest mountain) are man and wife.
